

Bristol Runners Raise Money for CfA

Students and teachers from Bristol University's Classics department have raised £880 for Classics for All by running in the annual Bristol Half Marathon in September.

The team were particularly inspired to run this year as it marked the 2500 year anniversary of the legendary first marathon in 400 BC. They were initially sponsored by Bristol's Institute of Greece, Rome and the Classical Tradition which is led by Prof Robert Fowler.

The Department of Classics and Ancient History at Bristol offers teaching bursaries funded by Classics for All for post and undergraduates. Once a week for ten weeks, four students are providing free classes to sixty pupils in Years 7-9 in local state schools where Classics did not previously feature in the curriculum.

